DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 1-7, drawn to a method for DSL handshaking between a remote DSL transceiver and a central office DSL transceiver, classified in class 709, subclass 237.
 - II. Claims 8-12, and 18-22, drawn to a remote DSL transceiver, classified in class 379, subclass 92.04.
 - III. Claims 13-17, and 23-27, drawn to a central office DSL transceiver, classified in class 379, subclass 92.03.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

2. Inventions I, II and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the system of group I does not require the specific structure and function of the remote DSL transceiver and/or the central office DSL transceiver as defined in group II and III. The subcombination of the remote DSL transceiver has separate utility such as transmitting first signals for a predetermined period of time to initiate the DSL handshaking to produce R-ETONES-

REQ, wherein the first signals comprise a plurality of even numbered carriers less one or more even numbered carriers, and includes periodic phase reversal. The subcombination of the central office DSL transceiver has separate utility such as transmitting first response signals in accordance with the alignment of the hyperframe to produce C-TONES-TTR, wherein the first response signals comprise a plurality of odd numbered carriers less one or more odd numbered carriers, and includes periodic phase reversal. These specific characteristics set forth in the subcombination of the remote DSL transceiver and central office DSL transceiver, are not set forth in the combination claim of the system. Since claims to both the subcombination and combination are presented, the omission of details of the claimed subcombination of the remote DSL transceiver and central office DSL transceiver in the combination of the system is evidence that the patentability of the combination does not rely on the details of the specific subcombinations.

3. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group I is not required for Group II nor III and vice versa, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Because these inventions are independent or distinct for the reasons given above and there would be a serious burden on the examiner if restriction is not required because the inventions require a different field of search (see MPEP § 808.02), restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

5. Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).

6. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species or invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected invention.

The election of an invention or species may be made with or without traverse. To reserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the inventions or species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the inventions or species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C.103(a) of the other invention.
